5Kaden began after 15-year-old Kaden Bagley lost his leg in a boating accident in 2021. In the days that followed, Jordan Thomas—who had experienced a similar accident as a teenager—showed up for Kaden with something incredibly powerful: hope, encouragement, community, and the reassurance that life could still be full of possibilities. Kaden and his family created 5Kaden as a way to give that gift back by raising money for the Jordan Thomas Foundation (JTF). What began as one family's desire to say thank you has grown into a pass-it-forward movement. Jordan poured into Kaden. Kaden poured into Carson. And each year, 5Kaden introduces another child whose life has been impacted by the generosity of the people who walked, ran, donated and sponsored the year before. JTF believes kids with limb differences should have the same opportunity as every other kid to run, play, compete, swim, explore and simply be a kid. Unfortunately, insurance often does not cover the specialized activity prostheses that make those things possible. While fighting insurance companies to fix the problem and change the laws, JTF steps into that gap, providing children with the prostheses they need throughout their growing years so they can live active, healthy lives without being defined by physical limitations.
